Abstract

This study aimed to determine the life of the SEEDS scholars in terms of professional, academic and social aspect. The participants of the study were the six (6) SEEDS Scholars of JBLFMU-Molo during the first semester of academic year 2011-2012 who were purposely chosen in the analysis of the study. Data were obtained through an interview conducted with each of the respondents. Interview guide questions were used by the researchers to collect data on each of the scholars. The responses were transcribed, encoded, analyzed and interpreted. It was gleaned from the study that the respondents had difficulty managing their time but in the end they were able to handle it. Their work helped them as a student in such a way that made them a versatile person. They were able to communicate well and properly deal with other people. Their experiences had helped them not only in their work but also in their studies.
